RALEIGH, (SGRToday.com) - Residents of the High Point area will have job opportunities with a global aviation company when HAECO Americas' aircraft interiors unit HAECO Cabin Solutions expands in Guilford County.

The company's plan is to create 127 new jobs over the next five years with an $11.3 million investment in the city.

The average annual salary of the new jobs will be $60,114, compared to the Guilford County average of $43,581.

HAECO Cabin Solutions, formerly known as TIMCO Aerosystems, LLC, provides interior design engineering, certification and project integration for aircraft fleets and manufactures a variety of components for aircraft interiors, including its line of Vector™ passenger seats and FeatherWeight™ galleys and lavatories.

Partners include the North Carolina Community College System, NCWorks, Duke Energy, High Point Economic Development Corporation, the City of High Point and Guilford County.
