On this Christmas weekend, People in Politics looks back at some of its most intriguing recent interviews. Host Donna Martinez talks with SEANC Executive Director Dana Cope and Civitas Institute Executive Director Francis DeLuca about the Mike Easley plea deal and the former governor's legacy. Then Martinez revisits her interview about outside money's impact on the midterm elections with Jonathan Kappler of the N.C. Free Enterprise Foundation and her discussion with state Rep. Bill Faison (D-Orange/Caswell) about his bid to win the top job at the state Democratic Party. Martinez also looks back at a recent conversation with Gary Pearce, longtime colleague and friend of former Gov. Jim Hunt, about Hunt's place in North Carolina history.
