

Public Policy Polling's Tom Jensen discusses with host Donna Martinez North Carolina's political landscape in the wake of Scott Brown's Massachusetts Senate win. Jensen believes some of the state's Democratic congressional incumbents are now vulnerable due to changing political winds.

Then Democratic political strategist Perry Woods debates conservative Republican Internet blogger Bob Lee about President Obama's State of the Union address, the Democrats' quest to defeat Sen. Richard Burr, the growth of voter registrations as unaffiliated rather than Democrat or Republican, John McCain's primary challenge from N.C. State alumnus and former congressman J.D. Hayworth and the legal implications for John Edwards from material published in two tell-all books.
