RALEIGH, (SGRToday.com) - Attorney Greg McGuire will be taking a seat on the Wake County Business Court to address complex business cases.

He was appointed by Gov. Pat McCrory. “Greg McGuire is a talented, hardworking attorney, whose extensive business litigation experience will prove indispensable,” said the governor in a statement. “We appreciate his willingness to serve our state and look forward to the valuable contributions he will make in the Business Court.”

McGuire is an attorney at the law firm Ogletree Deakins. He has more than 25 years of experience in a broad range of business and other civil litigation.

McGuire received his B.S. from Cornell University in the School of Industrial and Labor Relations and his J.D. from the University of North Carolina School of Law.
