RALEIGH, (SGRToday.com) - Newly re-elected Fayetteville Mayor Nat Robertson has been appointed to the state's workforce development group.

" Working collaboratively with workforce program leaders, the commission leads in the development of policies and strategies which enable the state's workforce to compete in the current and future global economy, " according to the appointment statement.

Robertson won the race with 52 percent of the vote. It is the second time he vanquished his challenger, Val Applewhite.
