RALEIGH, (SGRToday.com) - Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric Shinseki is gone, but the VA scandal continues to reverberate across the country, including here in North Carolina.

The North Carolina Division of Veterans Affairs (NCVA) has launched a “Vet Tip Hotline” to help veterans and improve services at VA medical facilities in North Carolina. The hotline will provide a resource for veterans and federal employees to confidentially report alleged misconduct within VA facilities, according to a news release.

The Vet Tip Hotline, via (844)-NC4-Vets or VetTips@DOA.NC.GOV, will connect the tipster directly to NCVA executive staff.

Tips will be referred to appropriate authorities within the USVA for investigation.

The hotline was set-up after the NCVA received specific allegations of misconduct at VA facilities in North Carolina, according to the statement. After conducting interviews, the allegations were found credible and referred to the appropriate authority.
