RALEIGH, (SGRToday.com) - In an effort to train the next generation of political campaign strategists and field operatives, state Democrats are seeking applicants for the new slate of Goodwin Fellows.

“Being a Goodwin Fellow prepares students and young adults an opportunity to acquire in-depth knowledge of political campaigns, business operations, communications strategy, and state-of-the-art data tools used in the field,” according to an email from the state party.

“Goodwin Fellows will be trained by recognized leaders in the North Carolina Democratic Party and will have several opportunities to meet elected officials across the state.”

Interested applicants can find out more at <http://www.ncdp.org/internship> or by sending a resume to GoodwinFellows@ncdp.org.
