

Trump Will Head To Greenville For Immigration Follow-up Speech

By Administrator

Friday, 02 September 2016 15:07 -

Donald Trump will deliver a speech on immigration in Greenville next week. The Republican presidential nominee Trump visited Mexico this week before laying out a plan to reform the country's immigration system which includes building a wall along the United States' southern border. Tuesday's speech appears to be a follow up to that address.

Democratic vice presidential nominee, Tim Kaine

, is scheduled to give what has been described as a "major national security address" in Wilmington on Tuesday. Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton is due to appear at a fundraiser in Charlotte, but there has been no word on whether she will speak at a rally in the state.